

WILLIAM “CHIP” EVELAND

HAROLD L. NELSON AWARD

William “Chip” Eveland is a professor of communications and (by courtesy) political science at The Ohio State University. Eveland’s research focuses on the role of political communication in developing informed and participatory citizens of democracy, both in the U.S. and also, increasingly, around the globe. Eveland’s most recent work emphasizes the important role of “listening” in political conversations where there are deep divides. Eveland has published (and been cited) regularly in communication and political science journals.

INFLUENTIAL MENTORS AT UW

Most were faculty such as Sharon Dunwoody, Michael Pfau, Jackie Hitchon and Al Gunther, who, when I needed it, gave me important advice.

Doug McLeod was really my first and probably most influential mentor of all. He also convinced me (it wasn’t easy...) to come to UW.

“Chip is much more than a prolific and influential scholar; he is a mentor and dedicated advisor.”

- Dhavan Shah

“Across his career, Dr. Eveland has engaged in award-winning, cutting-edge research that has motivated new agendas for communication and related disciplines.”

- Patricia Moy and Michael Slater

FAVORITE SPOT IN MADISON

School of Journalism and Mass Communication
UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN-MADISON

NOTABLE AWARDS

May 2018: Elected Fellow, International Communication Association

October 2008: University of Delaware Presidential Citation for Outstanding Achievement

March 1996: College of Letters & Science Teaching Fellow, University of Wisconsin-Madison

NOTABLE CITATIONS

Eveland, W. P., Jr. (2004). The effect of political discussion in producing informed citizens: The roles of information, motivation, and elaboration. Political Communication, 21, 177-193.

Shah, D. V., Cho, J., Eveland, W. P., Jr., & Kwak, N. (2005). Information and expression in a digital age: Modeling Internet effects on civic participation. Communication Research, 32, 531-565.

Mass Communication Research Center (based on the amount of time spent there)